VOLUME NINETEEN — ST. CLOUD, OSCEOLA COUNTY, FLORIDA THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1927 — NUMBER FOURTEEN

SURPRISE PROGRAM FOR BIG CHAMBER COMMERCE 'FEED' NOV. 30---TICKETS LIMITED!

All civic enthusiasts will be served a genuine treat at the Chamber of Commerce dinner and banquet to be presented in the rooms of the Chamber on the evening of November 30—if you are lucky enough to be one of one hundred and fifty persons.

That the number of guests will be limited to 150 was based upon the information that a lively program will be carried out so lively that L. E. Trickle, reporting for the committee which arranged the dinner and banquet, stated he could not announce it at this time.

President Pike took the floor however, stating that while he did not wish to disclose any of the particularly good features Mr. Trickle and his committee were working on, he felt that it was in order to advise the member that the manager of the Palm Theatre had agreed to put on a special show "Nobody's Widow" featuring Leatrice Joy, immediately after the banquet. At this juncture Mr. Trickle betrayed himself, which many interpreted as meaning that it might be pretty late before the chamber affair would adjourn.

It had been learned earlier in the day that the entire staff of the municipal band under the directorship of Mr. Henke, will render a musical program, and Mr. Pike's announcement that a free show will be singed for the diners caused Mr. Zimmerman to suggest limiting the number of tickets. After discussing this phase of the matter for some time, Mr. Bailey said that it had been determined that the room would comfortably seat 150 persons, and the tickets should be limited to that number. His suggestion was unanimously agreed upon.

As is known to all who have visited the chamber of commerce rooms, there is an excellent balcony provided to accommodate musicians, and this will be strikingly decorated, as well as will be the large hall. To make certain that this task might be executed in the best possible manner, the chair appointed a committee on decoration, stating that it was his belief that some of the ladies should serve thereon.

He named Mrs. Dana Eiselstein, Mrs. F. R. Seymour, Messrs. L. U. Zimmerman, S. W. Porter and L. B. Coleman, all of whom being present, accepted the assignment.

It was particularly stressed by the president that the committee should not sell more that the agreed number of 150 tickets, the sale of which would begin next Monday.

On the score of new business, there being none brought up in fact, and in view of the approach of Thanksgiving, Mr. Pike said he wanted everyone present to respond in the order he called the member, stating for what he or she was thankful for.

This caused the meeting to last well into the afternoon, but it was a credit to the thought to witness each and every one respond. Mr. E. L. Trickle being at the end of the table came in for the first expression. He was thankful for the great natural gifts, he said, commenting them fittingly, and especially for the fact that we had recovered from our financial depression. He said that it would be a mighty task for himself or anyone else to narrate all the things one was and should be thankful for.

A. J. Geiger was next and stressed how thankful he was and how thankful he knew every other citizen in St. Cloud was for our splendid schools.

And on the semi-symposium went through a long line of members, all of whom displayed a gift of vocabulary and breadth rather pleasing to any listener.

1621 — Thanksgiving — 1927

In the autumn of 1621, a year after the Pilgrims had landed at Plymouth, when the first crop had been gathered and stored, Governor Bradford sent out a fowling party from the colony, to bring in wild turkeys ,ducks and partridges. Then he invited Massasoit Samoset and Squanto and ninety members of the tribe to join the colonists in a great feast of thanksgiving for the bountiful crops and for the mercy of God in preserving them through rigors and the trials of that first terrible winter. They had suffered untold hardships; privation, cold and disease, yet they turned to God to give Him thanks that they had lived and prospered. They had built warm houses and stored away sufficient food so that this second winter might be faced with little misgiving. On the appointed day, after solemn and heartfelt prayers of gratitude, the Indians and colonists sat down to a great feast of fowls and vegetables and fruits. This was the first Thanksgiving Day. Since that time it has become an annual holiday in the United States, observed usually, on the last Thursday in November.

But the spirit of Thanksgiving has undergone a gradual change in the intervening years since that autumn day in 1621. It has become less a day of real Thanksgiving and more a day of feasting and celebrating—a day of football games.

Let us, if we can, recapture the spirit that first prompted the designation of Thanksgiving Day. Let us look back over the past years and count blessings we have been vouchsafed. Each of us has many things for which to be thankful, but there is one thing we all have in common, to be profoundly grateful for—our Association.

There is not a citizen in the state of Florida who has not been benefitted to some extent by observing Thanksgiving Day. Each knows just how much he, personally has been helped, and must, of course, realize the possibilities for more and greater benefits in the future.

MAN HIT BY TRUCK SUNDAY IS REPORTED DOING WELL AT AN ORLANDO HOSPITAL

Mr. G. R. Barrett was resting well at the Orange General Hospital, according to latest reports reaching the Tribune, and it was believed that he would recover from the rather severe injuries he received Sunday when hit by the St. Cloud fire truck.

Many conflicting reports as to the cause and responsibility of the accident have been afloat, and while it seems to be conceded that Rudy Jaranek who was driving the truck was making very high speed as he approached Pennsylvania avenue, those who have viewed the unfortunate affair from every angle believe that there were other factors involved which contributed to Mr. Jaranek's losing control of the big machine.

Jaranek had been summoned to a fire which was raging and flamming probably 10 feet high in the western section of the city, and took with him the city's chemical aparatus; but upon arrival he discovered it would require hose to extinguish the blaze. Immediately he turned back for the fire house to get them. Upon reaching Pennsylvania he had to make a light swerve it is said due to the fear that he might collide with an automobile approaching on Pennsylvania avenue. The chemical truck being hard to handle at a high rate of speed, it seems that the whole story rests in the fact that Mr. Jaranek unavoidably lost control of his machine, and it went its own course, plunging to the left and into the seat where Mr. Barrett was sitting on front of the Chamber of Commerce.

In hitting the man it was feared that injuries inflicted had been fatal, but reports today indicate that while he has badly bruised arm and has suffered a fractured if not a broken leg, he is doing as nicely as could be expected.

"IT WON'T BE LONG NOW!"

The St. Cloud Motor Company received a wire last Tuesday afternoon requesting a representive to be at the Jacksonville branch office Friday morning at nine o'clock on very important business. It is understood that all the Ford dealers in Florida received such wires and the dealers are expecting to see the new Ford which has been keeping so many people in suspence. Mr. G. W. Gulledge of the St. Cloud Motor Company states both he and Mr. H. L. Godwin will be present at this meeting.

PROTEGEE SELECTED TO SUCCEED LATE S. D. WARFIELD

R. L. NUTT IS NAMED CHAIRMAN AND TWO NEW DIRECTORS ARE CHOSEN TO KEEP SEABOARD POLICIES "GOING ON"

Florida has no regret in the selection of L. H. Powell, jr., to succeed the late S. Davies Warfield as president of the Seaboard Air Line Railway Company.

Mr. Powell was a close friend and confidant of Mr. Warfield and shares his views as to the future possibilities of this state.

At the time of Mr. Warfield's death he was vice president and comptroller of the company, and his selection to succeed Mr. Warfield was unanimous, due to the thorough understanding of Mr. Powell concerning Mr. Warfield's policies of expansion.

Robert L. Nutt, vice president and treasurer, was elected chairman of the board, a post also held by Mr. Warfield. Both men were former railroad clerks.

Mr. Powell, a Virginian by birth, becomes one of the youngest railroad presidents of the country. Entering the employ of the Seaboard in 1902 as a clerk in the office of the auditor of passenger accounts, he worked his way up through the controller's office and in 1918 became associated with Mr. Warfield in the management of the road's corporate affairs. In the last few years he has been associated closely with Mr. Warfield in the expansion and development of the railway system and its territory.

Mr. Nutt, who succeeds Mr. Warfield as chairman of the board, long has had an important part of the management of the company. A native of North Carolina, he started his career with the Seaboard in 1892 at the age of 19 as clerk in the general manager's office. He was appointed cashier in 1900 and six years later became treasurer. When the federal government took over the railroad in 1918, Mr. Nutt declined appointment as federal treasurer for the railroad administration but came to New York as secretary and treasurer of the Seaboard Corporation and shortly after was elected vice president of the road.

Westmore Willcox, Jr., member of Dillon Read & Co., and Robert Foster, Jr., vice president of the Continental Trust Company of Baltimore, one of the executors of Mr. Warfield's estate, were elected directors. Mr. Foster also was elected a member of the executive committee.

REARRANGING TOURIST STAGE FOR THE BAND

Although the finest sort of weather has been enjoyed at all the park concerts of the Municipal Band, F. W. Henke, director, the stage inside of the tourist club is being so arranged as to provide for the concerts in case that inclement weather should interfere at any future time.

Another large and appreciative crowd listened with the usual interest to the Municipal Band last Sunday afternoon, where Director Henke and his staff of 18 artists maintained the high position they have earned this season.

COWBOYS AND ST. CLOUD WILL CLASH TODAY

The Thanksgiving football battle between the high school teams of St. Cloud and Kissimmee is scheduled to exceed any previous battle between these contestants and probably the largest number of persons ever seen at a similar game in either St. Cloud or Kissimmee will witness the struggle.

"Do It Again" is the bold poster the Kissimmee boosters have sent out, while the St. Cloud boys, fired on by their losses here Armistice Day, are retorting, "If You Can."

Like th true sports the entire combination contains, both teams are rehearsing, rehearsing, with but one object in view—a clean cut victory.

It is claimed by those who have witnessed the St. Cloud contingent practice since Armistice Day that it will take greater playing on the part of the Cowboys on Thanksgiving than at any previous time.

The Armistice Day game was considered one of the best ever played here, if indeed the local team did have to leave the field in defeat; and it is the belief that they will even up the score with the Cowboys today.

One thing must be assured out of the hard training the members of both teams have done—some good material for genuinely big time gridiron feats will be developed.

The game at Winter Haven last week resulted in victory for St. Cloud, 13 to nothing. Winter Haven showed the team and its officials a splendid time, and the battle was conducted without anyone being injured.

SALKINS HAVING REMOVAL SALE

The Salkins Department Store in Kissimmee is having a big removal sale to avoid the expense of carrying the present stock to the company's new location which will be on Broadway just one block north of the present location. The Salkins's stock is complete in every way and this extensive sale will last several more days to give the public the opportunity of the sacrifice prices. From the start of the sale the store has been filled daily, and extra help has been employed. The people of this territory undoubtedly will take advantage of the wonderful bargains now on display.

AT MINISTERS' CONFERENCE

A distinguished visitor at Tuesday Afternoon's Minister's Conference was Rev. Guy L. Lamphear, director of the extension activities of the Moody Bible Institute of Chicago.

Rev. Lamphear expressed delight with the growth of St. Cloud since his last trip to the city and enjoyed several pleasant visits with old friends.

Mrs. Joseph M. Coun, of Floral Park, N. Y., who recently returned is at home to her friends with the Mix family on Indiana avenue.

TOURIST CLUB MEETING

A splendid attendance marked the meeting of the Tourist Club last Monday, which was called to order by its president, Dan L. Smith.

The first business on the calendar was that concerning the resignation of Mrs. Cramer as secretary, and Mrs. Miner was selected to fill the office for the ensuing year. Mr. W. H. Russell was then elected vice-president to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mrs. M. W. Peckham. Mr. Denhyer was chosen as chairman of the entertainment committee and the following were named as his assistants: W. H. Russell, Mrs. J. Webster, Mrs. John Raymond, Mrs. Charles Cottrell, Mrs. Mann and James Campbell.

Regarding the states members should answer to at roll call, it was decided we should answer from the state we resided in before coming to Florida.

The roll call of states showed the following leaders:

New York 48; Michigan 20; Ohio 20; Pennsylvania 18; Connecticut 14.

About 250 persons were present and listened to a very interesting program, a good many appearing thereon being called back for encores.

Everyone noticed and appreciated the quietness maintained by the group of card and checker players on the veranda during the club session.

RED CROSS OFFICE IS LOCATED IN HIGH SCHOOL

The office of the local Red Cross has been moved to the high school building and has a nice, large light and airy room on the second floor of the building, with all modern conveniences for the staff.

The improvement in the quarters was quite an assistance to the work entailed by the annual roll call, and Mrs. C. A. Dawley, president of the local Red Cross chapter expresses particular delight with the change.

W. C. T. U. MEDAL CONTEST

The W. C. T. U. Medal contest will be held at the Westside school auditorium on Monday evening, December 26. It will be conducted under the auspices of the Parent Teachers Association.

ENTERTAIN C. OF C.

Messrs. Newman and Graham, with Mrs. Lois Brown, pianist, accompanying, delightfully entertained members of the chamber of commerce Wednesday.

Their selections were very appropriate and called for encores and continued applause.

SPONGE SALES TOUCH $45,000

Sponge sales at the Tarpon Springs exchange totaled $45,000 Tuesday, says The Leader, with a big supply of the best grades being offered today.

Sales totals for the year at the exchange are $845,000, with about $50,000 on the outside. November sales are expected to bring the year's total to a million dollars.

RED CROSS DRIVE IS PRONOUNCED SUCCESS HERE

HIGH SCHOOL SENIORS GIVEN GREAT CREDIT FOR GOING OVER ONE HUNDRED PER CENT

The Red Cross roll call has gone over, according to chairman of the campaign, H. F. Zetrouer, and far over. However, this statement, said Mr. Zetrouer, is based upon pledges of people whom he is certain will pay in their money at the proper time.

Mr. Zetrouer said he was particularly pleased by the people of St. Cloud as well as all the cities in the eastern section of county.

The nineteen members of the Senior High school class were especially faithful in their work to make the effort not only a success, but one that probably will establish a record up to this time in Red Cross roll call for St. Cloud.

When asked if it was the purpose of he and his committee to relax in carrying the enrollment to a still higher mark, Mr. Zetrouer said "No, we are going on through tomorrow, and until we have received the remittances from the people who have pledged membership. It is, of course, upon the dependence we have in every pledge being fulfilled that I say the drive has gone over in the finest sort of shape—bigger than any I have known here before in normal peace times."

Mrs. C. A. Dawley, president of the St. Cloud Chapter of the Red Cross, who was also enthusiastic with the success of the roll call sent this written token of appreciation of the Tribune:

"The Red Cross, executive committee, wishes to thank the Tribune for publicity in the Red Cross drive, which began last Saturday. We expect to have our full quota before Thanksgiving day."

PERSONS IS HAVING A GREAT FACTORY DRESS SALE

The Persons Organization has just purchased the output of one of New York's most fashionable dress houses at an unusual low price. It has always been Person's policy to save their many customers as much as possible on every purchase, therefore, as stated in their advertisement they are actually selling ladies ready to wear at less than wholesale cost. Note the offering of Balbriggan and Jersey Dresses for $1.00, it doesn't seem possible but it seems to take the Persons Store to show how this can be done. In an interview with the manager he has also informed us that he is going to have one of the most complete stocks of holiday goods ever carried in St. Cloud, guaranteeing his prices to be lowered to rock bottom. It will certainly pay you to be on hand Friday morning and share in on the wonderful values being offered.

KENANSVILLE IS ENJOYING FINE CHAMBER OF C.

The Kenansville Chamber of Commerce reports a continual increase in membership since its formation a short time ago, with A. L. Freeman as president and M. R. Boyls as secretary-treasurer.

Information received from a special Kenansville correspondent today calls attention to the splendid success the hunters and trappers are having in that section. Mr. John Raisen, who was inadvertently mentioned in last week's Tribune as president, recently appeared before the board of county commissioners and received promise that the board would consider the chamber's request for assistance.

ATTEND W. C. T. U. MEET

Mesdames Rose Lackey, Edith Danforth, Flora Palmer, Flora Norris, Naomi William, Belle Bennett, Lou Crum, Mrs. Grace Slater, of Taft, and Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Parker and Mrs. L. M. Parker returned Saturday from Crescent Grove where they attended the State Woman's Christian Temperance Union Convention last week. They report a pleasant, profitable trip. Mrs. L. M. Parker was re-elected vice-president and continued as director of Christian citizenship.

MRS. BRUNS DIES AT NARCOOSSEE

The death on Saturday last of Mrs. Pauline Bruns, mother of state representative C. W. Bruns, at Narcoossee, was a district shock to the family and the many friends of the deceased.

Mrs. Bruns, who had lived in this county for a great number of years, had been in ill-health for some time and the end was not wholly unexpected by family and physican.

The body was prepared for shipment by Eiselstein brothers and accompanied on its way to Cincinnati, the deceased's old home by Mr. Bruns. There it will be laid to rest after other members of the family, living in the middle west, have been summoned to attend the funeral.

MRS. ADA TOOL EXPIRES

A card from Capt. H. G. Woodin, Dayton, Ohio, brings the sad news of the death of Mrs. Ada Tool, of Murdock, Neb., which occurred on November 14. Mrs. Tool had spent several winters in St. Cloud and has many friends who will regret to learn of her death.

Mr. D. W. Witmer and family, of Jacksonville, were visitors in St. Cloud this week. Mr. Witmer was contractor on city sewer work.

A THOUSAND CHARIOTS IN BATTLE SCENE OF "MOON OF ISRAEL"

PURSUIT OF ISRAELITES SHOWN IN THRILLING MANNER

There have been few greater pictures than "Moon of Israel" which will be shown at the Palm theatre next Monday and Tuesday. In all of history there has never been a more thrilling episode than the exodus of the Jews from Egypt. There is something tremendously thrilling in those scenes, where toiling Israelites push blindly against their slowly moving wagons, casting scared looks backwards for the pursuit they know will follow.

There is still something awesome in the sight of Pharoah's chariots thundering after the defenseless fugitives.

In "Moon of Israel" over a thousand chariots are used in this pursuit scene. On one side of a hill appears the slowly winding train of the Israelites, and behind on the plain they have just left, come the charging hosts of Pharaoh. Some remarkable shots are taken of these chariots. Line after line they come charging off the screen, Squadron after squadron, with plunging horses and eager charioteers. It is one of the most thrilling scenes in screen history, and as the pillar of fire springs up between them and the fleeing Israelites the watcher is given a taste of the thrills that are to follow.

While this is one of the biggest pictures of the year, the management of the Palm Theatre wants every man, woman and child in St. Cloud to see this wonderful picture. In most towns the admission price is 50c or more, but special prices will prevail during the showing of "Moon of Israel." Adults 35c, school pupils over 12, 25c and children 10c. A good comedy, "Micky's Eleven," featuring Micky McGuire, will fill out the bill.

DR. ALBERT WALKER CLAIMED BY DEATH

ST. AUGUSTINE, Nov. 21.—Dr. Albert H. Walker, president of the State School of the Deaf and Blind here, died at a St. Augustine hospital late today after he had collapsed while playing golf.

Dr. Walker's sudden death, pronounced due to heart disease, comes as it was totally unexpected, he having great shock to the community because apparently been in excellent health.

Today he attended to his usual duties at the State School for the Deaf and the Blind of which he has been president for twenty years or more, attended the Rotary luncheon at one o'clock where he seemed in the best of health and spirits and later went to the golf links for his accustomed round. He seemed to be in better form than usual, and played an exceptionally good game, friends said.

Dr. Walker was a leader in educational work for the deaf, being known nationally for the work he has done in building up the Florida school, which is one of the finest in the country.

He comes of a distinguished family of South Carolina, and was a son of the late Dr. N. P. Walker of Cedar Springs, S. C., who for many years was at the head of the South Carolina state school for the deaf. He has several brothers engaged in educational work of this kind. The dead president of the Florida state school is survived by his widow and two daughters, Mrs. William P. Ligon of Spartanburg, S. C., and Mrs. F. Homer Sargent of St. Augustine, also three grandchildren.

Funeral arrangements have not yet been completed but it has been decided to have the rites some time Wednesday.

Governor John W. Martin and members of the State Board of Control have been notified of the death of Dr. Walker and invited to attend the obsequies.

RECORD TOURISTS COMING

All the Florida beach resort hotels are looking forward to a bigger business this season than ever and their reservations show that tourists are coming to Florida in greater numbers than ever before.

INHERITANCE TAX REPEAL WILL BE LIVELY TOPIC

FLORIDA'S CONSTITUTIONAL ACTION IN RELIEVING LEVY ON DECEASED PERSON'S ESTATES WILL OCCUPY ATTENTION OF CONGRESS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 21.—Demand for repeal of the Federal Inheritance Tax made at open hearings conducted by the House Ways and Means Committee at Washington recently demonstrated that it will be one of the livest topics before Congress this winter, says the Florida State Chamber of Commerce. Florida is responsible for the national interest in the question, the chamber added, because it had worked unceasingly in this direction during the last two years, playing a lone hand at the outset and gradually winning supporters.

The state chamber has taken a leading part in creating sentiment for repeal of the measure. The tax, with its eighty per cent relate provision, discriminates against Florida and admittedly has been retained as a club designed to force this state to levy such an import. The chamber, as an organization, and President Herman A. Dann, of St. Petersburg, and Colonel Peter O. Knight, of Tampa, as individuals, have labored unceasingly to set the groundwork for repeal at the coming of Congress.

Members of the Ways and Means Committee opposed to repeal were so taken aback by the presence of so many leaders in the affairs of le nation at the recent hearing to plead for repeal that they charged the existence of a "lobby" and threatened a congressional investigation. Representatives of the legislatures of more than forty states have become members of the National Council of State Legislatures, an organization with whose forming Florida had not a little to do, an dwhich has as its sole object repeal of the Federal death tax. The national council is composed of five members from each state, appointed by the governor or the legislature, and five others, not necessarily ymembers of the legislature, appointed by the business interests. Both Mr. Dann and Colonel Knight are among the Florida members of this organization. The American Tax-payers League also has been organized by business interests with the same purpose in view. It will be remembered that members of the congressional committee sought to learn who was paying the expenses of witnesses who appeared before it if they were being paid by someone other than themselves. This was not made clear, but it might not be amiss, officials of the state chamber said, to add that the Florida state chamber of commerce has contributed $50 so far this year toward the support of the National Council of State Legislatures, and that many Florida business men are members of the American Taxpayers League.

Governor Al Smith, of New York, foremost Democratic presidential possibility at the moment, has just advised the New York state chamber of commerce that his views relative to the Federal Inheritance tax as expressed before a congressional committee last year by Mark Graves, tax commissioner of New York, have been misinterpreted. The governor has been understood as favoring the retention of the tax. The governor's about face to this extent did not result from a stricken conscience. It came about because Mr. Dean recently went to New York at his own expense and literally dynamited his way to the governor for an interview on the subject, obtaining from him at the conclusion of the conference a promise that he would make himself clear in a letter to the New York chamber. Previous to Mr. Dann's conference with the governor, Col. Knight had spent several weeks in New York City kindling a fire which had as its object the smoking out of the New York executive. Mr. Dann, before the New York visit, had gone to Washington from Florida on two occasions in the interest of the repeal campaign and to a half dozen other points during the summer to confer with Edgar Brown, of South Carolina, and other leaders instrumental in organizing the council of state legislatures.

The state chamber, receiving from all parts of the country editorial comment for and against retention of the estate tax, has seized upon every opportunity to promote discussion of the subject. Scores of editorial condemning the levy and pointing to its vicious nous have been inspired in all parts of the country by the chamber.

BIG CHURCH ATTENDANCE

More than 200 members and visitors were present at the Christian church last Sunday morning, where they heard a splendid sermon from the pastor, R. S. Taylor, and excellent music.

All who attended the church, where service had not been held since the building was closed for remodeling and additions last summer expressed their deep appreciation of the work Rev. Taylor had done in making possible the new edifice.

CANCER CAN BE CURED

Dr. S. M. Bordner, of St. Cloud, Florida, P. O. Box 64, certainly can cure them. She never fails. She cured a bad one on my nose. She has cured several other people in four blocks of me.

She cured Mr. Garner, RFD 1, Olden Ave., Orlando, Fla., who had tried to cure a cancer on his face for 20 years. Had the X-ray also; had it cut out two years ago, but it come back in four months and another one with it. Dr. Bordner killed and removed them, and he was able to go to his work in twelve days.

I wish all the world knew how successfully Dr. Bordner can cure cancers.

WHAT person is there that hasn't at one time or another smiled at livestock which reached "for poorer grass" outside the pasture than was under its very feet? Philosophers of old, seeing such, quickly expressed it in words of wisdom, thusly: "The grass is always greenest in the next pasture.

Don't be too quick to smile at "such foolishness of livestock" ---because---it is also a human trait---sometimes employed to great advantages for mankind, more often, however to selfish ends which reap the same rewards.

The most obvious example is the spirit which moves citizens of any community to "go away from home" to buy merchandise, necessities of life, and even their entertainment.

Nearly always such buyers put themselves to great trouble—they buy hurriedly—and get less for their money than if they had made their purchases at home where merchants are known and their word is a bond; where service is friendly; and where the store stands always ready to make satisfactory adjustments or changes—if necessary.

When you patronize only home industries you are making an investment for your own prosperity. Only in proportion to the increase in trade can St. Cloud grow. Which means—bigger and better stores and stocks of merchandise; better homes; more jobs; increased wages; better schools; bigger churches and increased values for our homes and farms.

THE GRASS IS JUST AS GREEN IN OUR OWN PASTURE

DR. FRANK CRANE SAYS

Learn From Elbert Gary's Life

The death of Judge Cary attracted attention to one of America's most picturesque figures. He drew attention to another one of those remarkable careers so characteristic of America. From a poor boy working for a few dollars a week to a multi-millionaire and to the head of probably the largest corporation in the world.

Judge Gary never discovered anything new. In his resume of the elements of character, we are struck by his emphasis upon the old-fashioned virtues. About all the virtues there are old-fashioned. There has never been discovered any substitute that was workable for being honest and upright.

Gary's Ten Commandments of Success which he formulated for a man with a reasonably healthy constitution and average mentality, are as follows:

1. Be honest, truthful, sincere and serious. Being slippery and tricky may gain you temporary advantage, but in the long run it will be your undoing.

2. Be considerate of others. Don't try to get ahead by pulling somebody else down. The more progress you make the less you will want to take advantage of others.

3. Guard your health, both morally and physically. The main thing to rely upon in a crisis or an emergency is being in fit condition.

4. Get an education. Know the fundamentals, such as arithmetic, spelling, grammar, geography and history. Also all the technical education you can.

5. No matter how much natural ability you have, it must be stimulated by persistent efforts to improve the mind and store it with useful information. A good memory is of incalculable benefit.

6. Have clean habits of life and select the right companions. You should know men of experience and higher rank than yourself. Nothing sups character like undesirable companions who are only bent on self-indulgence rather than self-improvement.

7. Be ambitious honorably and back this ambition up with energy, persistence and thoughtfulness. "I have had to fight steadily against laziness all my life," he says.

8. Be loyal to employers, friends and contry. A reputation for loyalty induces people to give you positions of trust and responsibility.

9. Cultivate stability. Don't be a rolling stone.

10. Most important of all: Observe the Golden Rule. This gets you further in the long run than any other maxim of life.

OUR TOURISTS

Here's a greeting to you, tourists
As you from the north return;
Here's a greeting—and a welcome,
And, we're happy when we learn
That you're glad to reach the Eden
Where the orange blooms—and grew;
Where it's summer all the winter
And you're far removed from snow.

When we see the geese and robins
And the blackbird and the duck;
In the bleak and chill November
Coming south to try their luck;
We believe, the Great Creator —
When He made the land and seas;
Fixed this place for winter tourists
So they need not chill and freeze.

For, the migratory birdies
Have been coming to our shore;
And,—in comfort, spend their winters
For a thousand years,—and more;
Which is simply, "self protection"
And, we feel inclined to say,
"Any person, with good judgment
Aught to know as much as they."

So, a GREETING to you, tourist
You, we hale with great delight;
When, from the frozen northland
With the birds you've taken flight;
To the land of constant sunshine
Where you fish, and hunt, and play
While up north folks freeze and suffer
Till the winter's gone away.

A Reservoir of Labor

There are signs in the United States that business is somewhat slowing up. Trade generally is on a smaller scale.

There is not as much building as there was. Post-war construction needs seem now to have been fully met.

This means that there is less demand for all the materials that go into building—sand, gravel, cement, stone, bricks, lumber, and steel.

Goods are being moved in diminishing rather than increasing quantities. Railroad loadings, always a reliable barometer of business, are "off."

When trade is off, employment is off. Wages are lower, and wage-earners haven't so much money to spend. When less money is spent, trade declines.

It is a kind of circle. The situation turns in upon itself and makes itself worse. If this went on to a logical conclusion all human activity would cease.

Such an idea, of course, is absurd. Things don't go on in the same way indefinitely. But the thought emphasizes what everybody knows—that the hand of destiny sometimes needs a bit of guiding.

There is one way in which the various governments—Federal, State, county, municipal, etc.—can exercise a helpful influence. They can go in for big public works of a kind which, when finished, will add to the welfare of the nation, and which, while they are under way, will give employment to thousands who might otherwise be idle.

Most important of these, probably, are good roads. We have built many, but we ought to build more.

In the cities, with the rapid increase in the number of automobiles, congestion is becoming intolerable. Through streets are tangles of traffic, and the business of providing new arteries and outlets has lagged far behind.

The same is true of many country roads. Get into the Sunday afternoon line on any main highway, if you don't believe it.

There ought to be more roads and wider roads, and they can be built only by the various governments. If the governments will, they can not only meet an acute need, but they can do a lot to check what looks like a recession of good times.

Another aspect of the same thing is water transport. We have not been doing much about that. The governments could confer a vast benefit on the country by increasing the usefulness of our navigable rivers.

President Coolidge has promised to see that the flood waters of the Central State are conveyed to the Gulf without overflowing the Mississippi. Here is an enterprise that will make the valley people safe and at the same time put many of them to work.

Muscle Shoals, where millions have been spent, has yet to be harnessed and developed to real efficiency. The great Boulder Dam project for the Colorado River should be settled and work begun.

People who cry, "Cut taxes, whatever you do," don't find an echo in this editorial mind. If cutting taxes keeps people out of work, it is the same old circle again.

When private work slacks up, public labor should increase. Then, when employment picks up and private industry is calling, public work should be slowed down.

Intelligent and progressive governments could thus put into effect a kind of reservoir of labor.—Liberty.

Fifty-Fifty

If but 50 per cent, of our people were enough interested in government to go to the polls in our last national election, may it not be due in large measure to the fact that leadership is grasped by men of babbling tongues rather than by those of functioning brains? It was not always so in America. It has never been so much so as today. And it is due to one of two reasons—to the inability of the leaders to think, or to a moral cowardice which persuades them to conceal thier thoughts.

Men are seeking the Presidential nomination—as leaders if you please—who, on vital issues, positively refuse to lead or to even think aloud. This means an utter lack of essential qualities; for if they have no ideas or plans they are not fit, and if they have ideas they dare not utter they are unfit. They lack either the mental capacity or the moral qualities fo which the mass of the people are waiting—and thus far in vain.

Little wonder that 50 per cent. of the people are too cynical or indifferent to vote when the issues that vitally concern millions, the success of our institutions and the good of society are utterly ignored by the very men who aspire to the leadership of the Nation.

Let the candidates remove their mufflers and their rubber heels, and like statesmen of the days when statesmen were leaders and thinkers, speak out and tell us where they stand on the Farm problem, Prohibition, Immigration, Flood Relief, Tariff, etc., etc., etc.

Then will the Presidential campaign mean a real debat to which the public interest will respond.

Ramon Novarro and May McAvoy in "Ben Hur"

BEN-HUR AT ARCADE THEATRE KISSIMMEE MONDAY AND TUESDAY

Part of the new Ben-Hur was made in Italy, and part in California. Never previously have such resources been lavished upon a production. To name just one typical instance, the building of the Ben-Hur navy.

A great shipyard at Leghorn was taken by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the construction of Rome's fleet and Gothar's pirate galleys. For a year and a half the work progressed. The vessels were practical triremes, equipped with sails and triple banks of oars, and the leaders were of ocean-going proportions. The launching of the ships was a wonderful ceremony, with high Italian officials and diplomatic representatives participating. Romans and pirates came to grapples on the broad Tyrrhenian; the action called for ramming, boarding, and the firing of the flagship. A bonus was paid to each sailor for the extra minutes spent on the doomed flagship; the last scene shows them diving off the blazing hulk in droves, whilst Ben-Hur rescues the commander Arrius on a plank. On a huge floatin- platform Fred Niblo filmed these scenes, distant and close-up, with the cameras high on scaffolding 40 feet above the sea's unquiet surface.

The Moors of Africa and the natives and animals of the storied East were drawn upon for the desert scenes, staged outside of Rome.

Shining, coal-black beauties from the illegal slave marts of the Sahara; grandly limbed Nubians from the Nile Cataracts; Syrians, Arabians, and Yemenites; a procession of camels from Tripoli; equine coursers from Transjordania; sheiks of Iraq and Hedjaz; Jews, Greeks and Romans, whose features reproduced the aquiline or straight-nosed types of their ancestors. 'Twas a veritable mart of the world, and here flowered forth the Roman holiday; for all Rome made the big days of the filming festal events and poured out into the Campagna, thousands upon thousands, headed by Italian Deputies and Fascist chiefs, and kept back out of the historic sequences by strong columns of stout Bersaglieri. . . .

The Latin-Oriental scene was renewed in southern California when the company returned from its Mediterranean wanderings. Cedric Gibbons, art director, and Horace Jackson, architect and archaeologist, now had all the materials in hand. The sequences of principals' scenes enjoyed the unrivaled resources of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. Aiding Mr. Niblo, W. Christy Cabanne filmed in technicolor the Flight Into Egypt, and Ferdinand Earle created Oriental backgrounds. An army of sculptors carved the massive figures to adorn the race course, and another army of mechanics laid out a hundred-acre area and built around it the Circus Maximus. The great Circus of Antioch was at last complete, and the last filming of Ben-Hur was the Race.

As Rome poured forth her hordes to see the motley mart of the East, so Los Angeles turned out en masse to see the terrific race-duel of Messala and Ben-Hur. Every studio in Hollywood declared a holiday. Distinguished representatives of civic, business and social life mingled with the foremost stars and directors of all companies in paying tribute to the most stupendous feat of the Newer Art. Scores of thousands of folk—garbed in Grecco-Roman or Oriental dress—occupied the seats of the Circus, and the casual spectator was just as likely to jostle a Fairbanks, a Pickford or other screen star in the Orientalized throng as to encounter a group of undistinguished extras.

B. A. DANN ASKS RELEASE FROM PRESIDENCY STATE CHAMBER

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 22.—Herman A. Dann, of this city, president of the Florida State Chamber of Commerce during the last four years, today declared he would not accept the office again.

"It is not my desire to relinquish the presidency of the Florida State Chamber of Commerce because there are no further contributions I can make to its welfare," he said. "I desire to step aside because there are others who can make these contributions in greater measure." Mr. Dann explained that he desires the privilege of supporting a new personality, of giving his allegiance to a new leader, "of working in the interest of Florida unfettered by civic official responsibility."

G. A. R. PAYS COMPLIMENT TO McFARLANE

At the last meeting of L. L. Mitchell Post, G. A. R. held November 18, 1927, by unanimous vote the following resolution, presented by F. F. H. Pope, was adopted, and by motion of the Post, F. F. H. Pope was requested to present it to the Tribune for publication:

Resolved, By L. L. Mitchell Post, G. A. R. of St. Cloud, Florida, That those of this Post No. 32 G. A. R. of St. Cloud, Florida, who have listened to the broad, patriotic address of Lieutenant H. P. McFarlane on Armistice Day, in St. Cloud, Florida, give it as our opinion that it was the fairest and most comprehensive exposition of questions involved in the World War, in St. Cloud, or Osceola county; and give it as the sense of this Post that it should be published and preserved as a memorandum for all time.

Resolved, Farther, That this resolution shall be referred to a committee of review.

That this committee be directed to present Lieutenant McFarlane with a copy, with the compliments of the post.

BANK YOUR TREES

It seems necessary to again call attention to the matter of banking young trees. As a matter of safety in case a cold snap should come, young trees up to four years old should be banked. This applies to all varieties of citrus in Central Florida, to unprotected areas in South Florida, and to Satsumas in North and West Florida. If this banking has not already been done it should be attended to at once. Make the banks large enough to withstand the winds and heavy rains and as high as practicable in order to protect the trunk in case of a freeze. If a cold wave is predicted see that banks are renewed where worn down.

GENERAL COUNTY NEWS ITEMS

Sam L. Laufer, jr., president of the Kissimmee Kiwanis Club has been chosen lieutenant governor of Kiwanis for Central Florida, the state convention being held at Hollywood last week. Jacksonville was chosen for the 1928 convention.

The Business Girls Class of the Kissimmee Methodist Sunday School held their annual November Musical evening at the church on Tuesday of this week. The usual delightful program was rendered and announcement is made for much work to be accomplished by this club during the winter months.

Walter C. Bass and Prater Gilbert, owners of the Bass & Gilbert Market at Kissimmee were the subject of a lengthy article in last week's Gazette. Mr. Walter Bass is a son of the late Walter Bass, who served the county for many years on the school board and also served as county registration officer, this last position being now filled by the younger Walter C. Bass of the above firm. Prater Gilbert is a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Gilbert, who are among the pioneers of Osceola county, the senior Mr. Gilbert having been city clerk in Kissimmee for more than a quarter of a century.

The county judge's office had a busy week issuing hunting licenses to hundreds who know of the fame of Osceola county as a good place to find game. Reports of many turkeys and quail brought in have proven the county's reputation as the "happy hunting ground."

At a special meeting of the county commissioners held last Thursday final settlement was made with Contractors Steed & Walker on the work done on the Kenansville road, which was paid out of the $150,000 bond issue. Delivery of the bonds was made last week, the county receiving par and $3,325 accrued interest for the bonds. The board allowed the contractor six per cent interest on amount actually due them since August, due to delay in delivery of bonds by litigation.

Kenansville's new Chamber of Commerce held a business session last Friday evening at which time plans were discussed for a campaign of publicity. This is Osceola county's newest commercial organization.

V. M. Hill and Earl Aker of Narcoossee, were among the first bunch of hunters to get into the woods during the the first week of the open game season in Osceola county.

The county judge says there is no law against "hunting" on Sunday, but the firing of a gun lays one liable to prosecution. Members of the county archery clubs would probably get their game without arrest, if they choose Sunday "to hunt."

FLORIDA UNIVERSITY NEWS

UNIVERSITY OF FLORIDA, Nov. 25.—Preliminary plans for a new dormitory on the campus of the University of Florida to cost in the neighborhood of $200,000 are being prepared in the office of Rudolph Weaver, architect for the State Board of Control and head of the School of Architecture. The plans will be submitted for the approval of the Board of Control at its next regular meeting.

According to Mr. Weaver, the new dormitory, which will be known as unit "G" of the composite dormitory plan, is to be the same general style as the existing dormitories, Thomas and Buckman hall. It will fit in at the south end of the two halls to form a "U" which will eventually be filled out to form a quadrangle. It is planned to have the resulting court turned into a semi-tropical garden.

Student Welfare

Careful checking on students' welfare now being carried on at the University of Florida under the direction of Harley W. Chandler, registrar, has practically eliminated the great number of disasters that have marred the roster of the state institution in years past.

Rare Chemistry Books

A rare set of bound rare chemical periodicals costing $1550 and dating back to 1832 has been recently secured for the library of the Chemistry Department of the University of Florida, according to Prof. Walter B. Belsler, in charge of the library. This set is known as Liebig's Annalen der Chemie; it consists of 451 volumes and contains the proceedings of one of the world's foremost chemical societies.

Debating Program

Plans are being made for the most extensive varsity debating program in the history of the University of Florida, according to announcement from Prof. Paul S. Buchanan who is in charge of public speaking and dramatic work at the state institution.

Arrangements are being made for two long trips for the debating team, one squad going as far north as Washington, D. C., and the other as far west as Oklahoma. Three men will make each of these trips during which approximately 12 colleges will be engaged in making a total of 24 inter-collegiate debates outside of the state. It is also planned to have a number of debates on the Florida campus and at least two are planned for the auditorium of the Women's College at Tallahassee.

Degrees in Journalism

Degrees in journalism will be awarded this spring for the first time in the history of the University of Florida, according to Dean Walter J. Matherly of the newly created College of Commerce and Journalism. Three such degrees are scheduled to be granted at commencement in June.

The College of Commerce and Journalism, despite its tender age, ranks in enrollment along with the oldest colleges in the University and will also probably award 18 degrees in Business Administration this year. It has a freshman class numbering 152 men.

NEW CAFE IN KISSIMMEE

Mr. M. Colado, of Norwalk, Conn., has recently remodeled the Broadway Cafe in Kissimmee, making it one of the finer cafe's in the county.

Mr. Colado has been in Florida the past six years, but spending his summers in Norwalk, where he managed Sullivan House at Darien's Point.

The owner and manager of the remodeled Broadway cafe states that he has a number of friends in this section of Osceola county, and for that reason wishes to call their attention to an advertisement in another column of today's Tribune.

M. J. Hyney, of Albany, N. Y., and L. D. Moreness, of Sharon Springs, N. Y., were among the arrivals in St. Cloud last Friday. Mr. Moreness has spent many winters in St. Cloud.

The members of the club were divided into two opposing side at the beginning of the score contest. At the next meeting the side that made an aggregate low score will entertain the high scorers.

Refreshments of butterscotch pie, toasted cheese sandwiches and coffee were served.

Those present were Mesdames W. T. Adams, J. J. Johnston, H. E. Hedrick, Miller Strayer, Roy Long, Fred Tullis, R. S. Lackey, Sam Brammar, A. B. Wigginton, E. O. Ward, and A. J. Allison.

MRS. WILLIAM DODD COMPLIMENTS MRS. ANNA K. DALBEY

Mrs. William Dodds was hostess Friday afternoon at one of the more pleasant social affairs of the season, when she entertained at her home on Florida avenue with a shower from 3:00 to 5:00 p. m., complimenting Mrs. Anna K. Dalbey, whose marriage to Mr. John Philip Becker will be an event of this month.

Quantities of red roses were arranged in vases about the living room where the guests were received.

In an artists' contest, in which each guest was provided with pencil and paper to make a sketch of one guest present, Miss Hetty Rice received a prize for recognizing the largest number of "portraits."

Miss Ellen Lersch, of Orlando, pleased the guests with two readings which she gave in a charming manner, "Here Comes the Bride" and "When Angelina Comes Swinging Down the Line." She also gave a banjo number with piano accompaniment. Mrs. Leonard Isaacson, of Orlando, rendered a violin solo.

A handsome piece of tapestry and book ends were presented to Mrs. Dalbey, the honor guest.

Dainty refreshments of fruit punch and cake were served by the hostess.

The friends of the honor guest who were invited for the occasion were Mesdames M. Clark Ellis, Beck, Dale, Nichols, L. Farris, Cora Farris, Sam McBeath, Goodrich, Everett, Coghill, S. Rice-Miller, J. Klotz, Armour, Logan Ellis, Sam Brammar, J. J. Johnston, McLaughlin, R. W. Chadwick, Ed. George, S. W. Porter, J. S. Turney, H. Heppe, M. W. Harman, O. R. Bleech, Amos Kedal, Harold Hedrick, L. C. Riddle, M. B. Goodrich, Wm. Hall, Mrs. Leonard Isaacson and Miss Ellen Lersch, of Orlando, nieces of Mrs. Dodds, and Misses Hetty Rice, Anna, Minnie and Louise Heppe and Althea Miller.

A WEDDING OF MUTUAL HAPPINESS

On the evening of Thursday, November 17th, Mr. Frank McConnell and Mrs. Fannie Sayers, two happy people, took their stand beneath a beautiful canopy of fern and flowers.

In a few minutes, Rev. Frank Kenney by theological mathematics changed the two into one, and a new family was founded.

The newly transformed were showered with many congratulations, and many gifts helped to prove the good will of the guests, who were: Mr. and Mrs. McKay, Mrs. Francher, Mr. George, Sr., and wife; Mrs. Pearce, Mrs. Bacon, Mrs. Humphrey, W. Frank Kenney and wife.

I am not attempting to describe the feast that followed the wedding or try to enumerate the many delicious viands served, for Tribune space is always limited, owing to its large clientile; but must say that the dimensions and avoirdupoise of the merry guests was greatly increased since their entering the pleasant home of the bride.

Of course the parson kissed the bride as part of his honorarium, but the groom did not deduct it from his generous testimony of his appreciation of the parson's skill.

The "newly wed" will continue to dwell in St. Cloud, and help to make this city "bigger and better every day."

The Smashing Big New York Hit
A Three Act Comedy with a Zip and a Punch that Will Keep You Laughing all the Way.
(NOT A PICTURE)
Auspices Business Men's Club
Reserved Seats, at Edwards, 75c
General Admission, 50c Children, 35c

"IN WALKED AUNTIE" WILL BE SHOWN HERE ON 29TH

All arrangements have been completed for the presentation of "In Walked Auntie" by the Lake Players under the auspices of the Business Men's club at the G. A. R. Hall Tuesday evening, November 29. F. C. Lake manager and director of the company, met with a committee from the club of which T. G. Moore is chairman, and worked out details for the staging of the show. It was decided to have a graduated scale of prices with a section of the house reserved. These seats may be purchased at Edwards Pharmacy. A special rate will be given to children.

Mr. Lake guaranteed the committee one of the best performances ever seen in St. Cloud. His players are competent dramatic people, some of whom have had former professional experience. The show scored such a big hit in Kissimmee that it was repeated. That "In Walked Auntie" is an attraction of merit is evidenced by the fact that the Rotary club of Auburndale booked it for an early presentation.

"In Walked Auntie" is a fast farce comedy, replete with action and clever lines. In New York it was voted one of the two best comedies of the 1926 season. It has to do with a young married couple who try to "put on airs" and who suddenly find themselves called on to produce the goods. That's where the fun begins. And it's all done to fool "auntie" who arrives unexpectedly. "Hubby" is forced to become the butler, a total stranger is forced in as "hubby," a crook gets into the house and adds to the complications until there is just one mix-up after another.

"NOBODY'S WIDOW" WINS

Leatrice Joy Seen to Advantage in Excellent Comedy

We have always admired Leatrice Joy. We will like her more after seeing her latest star picture, "Nobody's Widow," at the Palm theatre Wednesday. It's a delightfully sophisticated comedy-drama in the best Avery Hopwood vein, and that means it will appeal to the laity as well as to the cognoscenti.

It starts in England where the "widow," after being happily wedded, naturally goes into "widowhood" exile after discovering her newly acquired husband in the arms of another woman. This is too much and the "widow" skips over to Santa Barbara, California, and finds solace with her guy friend, a blonde widow, who makes it a point to find divertisement for the bereaved "widow." When the "widow's" hubby shows up under the alias of the "Duke of Moreland," the situation is further complicated—and fun begins.

An unusually brilliant cast is seen with Miss Joy, including Charles Ray, Phyllis Haver and David Butler, all excellently cast. Donald Crisp directed.

CIRCUS COMING TO SAINT CLOUD NEXT THURSDAY, DEC. 1

It's the red wagons that's the question of the hour in St. Cloud at least for the small boys of six, as well as for those of sixty. The billboards, barns and dead walls are announcing with all the fluency of pictorial art the coming of the Gentry Bros. Shows. And already preparations are being made for the one big holiday event of the year, acknowledged to be better than Christmas and the Fourth of July put together—circus day. About the time the milkman is making his rounds on the morning of December 1, the first of the two long trains of cars will be coming, slowly pulling into the railroad yards.

Much is promised by Gentry Bros. this season. The show has grown and prospered for almost half a century—to be exact 46 years. European agents have sacked the Old World in a quest of novelties. The question of salary was not considered for the particular novel and humorous act. There are over 100 artists who take part in the big show program. New acts and faces will tend to eradicate the fallacy that all "shows" are alike. Among the features will be the Flying Jordans; the Maxwell Trio, gymnasts; the Florence family of riders; the DeLong Sisters, acrobats; Arthur Borella, the slightest satured clown in the world; Tommy and Betty Waters, dancers on a lofty wire; Ray Glamm in a slide for life down a wire from the topmost point in the tent and scores of other high-class features.

An immense street parade will be seen on the downtown streets at noon on show day. There will be upwards of five bands of music and scores of allegorical tableaus. There will be performances at 2 and 8 p. m. The doors opening an hour earlier. Merchants and others are preparing for one of the largest crowds in town on show day in years.

SEGREGATION OF RACES IN SCHOOLS IS UPHELD

RULING OF SUPREME COURT IS ON CASE FROM MISSISSIPPI

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Race segregation of children in public schools was sustained today by the supreme court.

The ruling was on a case from Mississippi where an attempt was made to compel the state to permit Martha Lum, daughter of an American citizen of Chinese descent to attend the Rosedale Consolidated High school in Bolivar county, provided exclusively for white children.

Declaring that "the right and power of the state to regulate the method of providing for the education of its youth at public expense is clear," Chief Justice Taft, in delivering the opinion, said it was "within the constitutional power of the state legislature to settle without intervention of the federal courts under the constitution, whether it would require a Chinese citizen of the United States to send his children to public schools provided for the colored races.

The court held it was within the discretion of the state to set aside schools exclusively for the use of white children provided equal facilities are furnished children of other races within the school districts and that when schools are provided for races other than white, the states may require children of Chinese birth to attend them.

Former decisions cited included one in a case from Louisiana which upheld the Jim Crow law requiring railways to furnish separate compartments for whites and negroes. Having found such law constitutional the court indicated that it was comparatively clear that children not Caucasian could be required to attend schools for colored children.

Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Ledbetter are receiving congratulations on the arrival of a son, born Sunday afternoon, November 13, 1927.

Mrs. Ledbetter was formerly Miss Avis Cottrell of St. Cloud.

ORDER OF EASTERN STAR

There will be a special meeting Tuesday, November 29, at 7:30 p. m., to receive our Grand Matron, Mrs. Angie J. Mack, and for the purpose of initiation and a mechbrie business as the Grand Matron may direct.

Mabel T. Clark, Worthy Matron

INTRODUCTION

Archibald Bennett, wealthy bachelor, travels constantly in the interest of his health. He meets Isabel Perry, who recommends a life of crime, adventure, romance and excitement as a cure for his nerves. Archie goes to Bailey Harbor to investigate a summer house for his sister. A heavy storm forces him to spend the night there. During the night he is awakened by footsteps, and in an encounter with the intruder, who sees Archie's figure reflected in the mirror and shoots. Archie fires in return, wounding the intruder, who makes his escape. Archie plans flight to evade publicity. He starts cross-country afoot in the night. At dawn he is stopped on a lonely country road by "The Governor" master-mind criminal who mistakes him for a fellow criminal. Archie, fleeing, is afraid to tell the truth—falls in with "The Governor," is whisked across country in a stolen car. Sees story in newspaper of killing at Bailey Harbor and, frightened, he decides to say nothing but stick with his strange friend and await development. At Cornford, N. H., Archie comes upon Isobel Perry at the hotel desk but she refuse to recognize him. The Governor, by a clever plan, switches stolen money for good money. Archie used as decoy—making love to niece of agent sent to meet eccentric Congdon here next day. Archie and the Governor drive away without creating suspicion and speed across state to deliver the $65,000 to train-robber Leary at Walker's farm, where Archie gets new insight into workings of the crime world. At the first opportunity Walker's daughter appeals to Archie to help her elope with a young farmhand. He decides to assist, cutting away from the Governor and taking the couple across state in a wild night ride. Seeing Sally onto the train—he is rewarded with a fond farewell kiss—and he turns to find Isabel Perry had witnessed the whole scene. Isabel is not pleased at meeting Archie again and accuses him of spying upon her. She tells him that if he has really shot Putney Congdon as he claims, he has ruined everything. Archie returns to the hotel greatly mystified. Next morning the Governor arrives—explains to Archie that he has aided Sallie to marry a notorious diamond thief—and that Sallie had deceived him concerning the whole affair.

They proceed to New York to the Governor's home, where they are visited by Julia, the Governor's sister. Julia explains to Archie that her brother is passing through a strange phase—caused by a cruel shock some time before. Now read on:

When the Governor reappeared Julia and Archie were seemingly in the midst of a leisurely discussion of the drama for a few moments, she slipped a sealed envelope into his hands.

"If anything should happen to him I should like to know. It was understood between us when he called me by telephone this morning that I was not to hint in any way as to his identity, or mine, for that matter, and I shall not break faith with him. I trust you completely. I shall be at that address until the first of October. You can wire me in any emergency."

Shortly after, she took her leave.

Archie learned from Baring, who brought up his breakfast, that the Governor had left the house, and would hardly return before six.

Later he chose a stick with care from a rack at the front door, walked to the Avenue and turned determinedly cityward, walking jauntily. He grinned as he saw seated in the upper window of the most conservative of all his clubs one of his several prosperous uncles, and having sufficiently exposed himself to the eyes of the world he determined to eat luncheon in the park restaurant. He watched idly a young woman with two children who occupied a table directly in his line of vision. Children always interested him, and the boy was a handsome little fellow, but it was the girl who held Archie's attention, with a perplexed sense that he had seen her before. The fine oval face, the eyes dancing with merriment, sent his thoughts flying to Bailey Harbor.

He continued to inspect them with a deepening conviction that the woman was Mrs. Congdon. It was a disquieting thought that there under his eyes, so close that the babble of the children occasionally reached him across the intervening tables, was the family of the man he had shot.

The Congdons had eaten their meal hurriedly and were already paying their check. He watched them move away toward the interior of the park, marked their direction and chose a parallel course with a view to keeping them in sight.

Then a piercing scream, the shrill cry of a child in terror.

"Help! Help! Oh, Edith! Edith!"

The cries sent him at a run toward the place in which he left the Congdons.

Rounding a curve in the path he saw a man rushing down the road with Edith in his arms.

Archie redoubled his pace, passed Mrs. Congdon and gained the car as the man with the child in his arms, jumped into it. The car was moving rapidly and a man's voice bade the driver hurry. Within the child's screams were suddenly stifled, the door swung open for an instant, and a blow, delivered full in the face, sent Archie reeling into the road.

When he gained his feet, Mrs. Congdon stood beside him moaning and wringing her hand. A mounted policeman rode upon the scene, listened for an instant to Archie's explanations, and, sounding his whistle, set off after the car at a gallop.

Mrs. Congdon had fainted. Archie's nose bled from the rap in the face and his back ached where he had struck the earth. The sergeant plied him with questions which he answered carefully. When his name was asked he answered promptly.

"John R. Wright, Boston; stopping at the Hotel Ganymede."

"Business?"

"Broker, Nanaquit Building, Boston."

Mrs. Congdon had recovered sufficiently to tell her story, and to Archie's relief corroborated his own version in a manner to dispose of any question as to his innocence. Her composure struck Archie as remarkable and her replies to the officer's questions were brief and exact. To Archie's surprise, she gave her name as:

"Mrs. George W. Kendall, 117 East Corning Street, Brooklyn."

It was incredible that any one could lie with so convincing an air. He was satisfied that she was Mrs. Congdon, and that the child she called Edith was the original of the photograph he had seen at Bailey Harbor. When the owners of several machines offered to take her home, she glanced about uncertainly and her eyes falling upon him seemed to invite his assistance.

"Pardon me, but if I can serve you in any way——"

"Thank you," she said with relief. "I must get away from this; it's unbearable."

He put her and the boy into a taxi and instructed the driver to go to Brooklyn!"

For a few minutes she was busy comforting the child and Archie, deep in thought, turned to meet the searching gaze of her gray eyes.

"You are a gentleman"; I am sure of that; and I feel that I can trust you. I am in a strange predicament, and I'm forced to ask your help. The name and address I gave the police were fictitious. I know it has a queer look; but I had to do it. I know perfectly well who carried away my little girl. The man and woman you saw in the car were servants employed by my father-in-law who cordially dislikes me.

"Of course I'm not going to Brooklyn. Please tell the man to drive to the Altmore, ladies' entrance. I'll walk through the main door and take another taxi. I'm only sorry your name had to be brought into it."

"You needn't bother about that at all," Archie replied with a reassuring smile. "The name and address I gave were both false."

He looked at her covertly and they laughed with the mirth of children planning mischief in secret.

"The little girl," he ventured; "you are not apprehensive about her?"

"Not in the slightest. My father-in-law is most disagreeably eccentric, but he is very fond of my children. It was quite like him to attempt to carry off the little girl! always a particular pet of his. I was shocked, of course, when it happened. But I am not worried. I meant to put the children quite out of my husband's way. It's rather odd, as I think of it, that my husband didn't personally try to take the child from me."

This, uttered musingly, gave Archie a perturbed moment. But the car had reached the Altmore, and he lifted out the boy and accompanied them to the door.

CHAPTER VI

Refreshed by a nap and a shower, Archie was dressed and waiting for the Governor at seven, who arrived a few minutes later.

"Here's an extra I picked up downtown. The scream of the evening is a kidnapping—most deplorable line of business."

While Archie waited for the Governor to dress, he carefully read the account of the kidnapping in the park. The police had not yet learned that the two most important witnesses had given fictitious names.

In spite of the Governor's frequently avowed assertion that he wished to know nothing about him, Archie felt strongly impelled to make a clean breast of the Bailey Harbor affair, the two encounters with Isabel and his meeting with Mrs. Congdon. His resolution strengthened when the Governor appeared, dressed with his usual care and exhilarated by his day's adventures. Baring retired after the dinner had been served, and the Governor, in cozy accord with his cigar, remarked suddenly:

"Odd, you might almost say singular! I've crossed old man Congdon's trail again! You recall him—the old boy we left to the tender mercies of Seebrook and Walters'. Well, I met today one of the most remarkable of all the men I know who camp outside the pale. Perky is his name—a jeweler by trade, he fell from his high estate and went on the road as a yegg—then entered into the game of boring neat holes in the rim of twenty-dollar gold piece, leaving only the outer shell and filling 'em up with a composition he invented that made the coin ring like a marriage bell. While he was still experimenting he ran into old Elphabet sitting with his famous umbrella on a bench in Boston Common. Perky thought Elphabet was a stool pigeon for a con outfit, but explanations followed and it was a case of infatuation on both sides. The old man was as tickled with the scheme as a boy with a new dog. He now assists Perky to circulate the spurious medium of exchange. Perky says he's wonderful ally, endowed wit hall the qualities of a first class crook."

"You'll appreciate that better," said Archie, "when you hear what I know about the Congdon family. You've been mighty decent in not pressing me for any account of myself, but you've got to hear my story now. We'll probably both be more comfortable if I don't tell you my name, but you shall have that, too, if you care for it. So many things have happened since I left Bailey Harbor that you don't know about, things that I have not dared tell you, that I'm goin to spout it all now and here. If you want to chuck me when you've heard it, well enough; but I don't mind saying that to part with you would hurt me terribly. I never felt so dependent on any man as I do on you; and I've grown mighty fond of you, old man."

"Thank you, lad," said the Governor.

He listened patiently, nodding occasionally or throwing in a question. When Archie finished he rose and clapped him on the shoulder.

"By Jove, you've tossed my stars around like so many dice! I've got to consult the oracles immediately."

He darted from the room, and when Archie reached his study the Governor was poring over a map of the heavens.

"Your Isabel's all tangled up in our affair?" declared the Governor with mock resentment. She will dawn upon your gaze again very soon—I feel it coming. Our next move is outlined—we must go to Rochester."

"Would you mind telling me just what Rochester has to do with all this?" demanded Archie testily.

"My dear boy, Rochester is one of the suburbs of Paradise. You may recall that I told you of a certain tile in a summer house where my adored promised to leave a message for me if her heart softened or she needed me. Well, the secret post-office is at Rochester; there the incomparable visits her aunt and about this time of year she's likely to be there. And if you knew the way of the stars and could understand my calculations you'd see that your Isabel is likely to have some business in that neighborhood just now."

"Rubbish! I happen to know that

Clean heat

No black kettles to scour!

How much pleasanter cooking is, when there are no black pots and pans to scour afterward! Every woman who cooks with a Perfection Oil Stove is spared that horrid nuisance.

There is never a speck of soot. For in the long chimneys, every drop of oil is completely burned before the heat reaches the cooking.

Soot, as you know, is half-burned kerosene—just wasted heat. With Perfections you have real fuel economy, as all the oil is changed into cooking heat. They burn only kerosene, the safe household fuel.

Miss Allen says—
"Utensil bottoms are free from soot when cooking is done on the Perfection Stove."
MISS LUCY G. ALLEN

Perfection flames stay at the height you set them, so you need never fear they will "creep up" and make the kitchen sooty.

With Perfection you will have wonderful cooking results, and your utensils will stay shiny as new. See the newest Perfections at any dealer's—1 to 5 burner sizes. Priced from $7.25 to $130.

DR. PHILLIPS OUTLINES PLAN FOR MAKING INVESTIGATION OF STATE'S SCHOOL SYSTEM

RESEARCH BUREAU OF COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY HAS BEEN EMPLOYED WITH A VIEW OF AIDING IN WORK PROVIDED FOR BY THE LAST LEGISLATURE

"Approximately $61,500,000.00 is being spent each year for public education in the State of Florida. Notwithstanding this enormous sum, the different educational institutions during the last legislature clamored for more money, claiming that they have insufficient funds to properly carry on their educational program." This statement was made to a representative of the press by Chairman Dr. I. E. Phillips of the Educational Survey Committee of Florida recently appointed by Governor Martin. Mr. Phillips further stated that "the cry became very insistent and the requests for additional funds so great that temporary relief was attempted. The legislators were reluctant, however, to appropriate any additional funds until they knew from an authorized and unbiased source just how the present funds are being expended, and if the state is receiving full value of each dollar expended in public education." "There is a general feeling," Mr. Phillips said, "among legislators, educators and the public that there is too much overlapping of responsibility in our school system, making it difficult to place responsibility for any extravagance, poor administration, or school inefficiency that might exist."

"The legislature, therefore, enacted a law creating an Educational Survey Commission of the State of Florida with power to employ recognized experts from outside of the State of Florida, for the purpose of making an impartial and unbiased investigation as to the organization, administration, financial condition, and general efficiency of our educational system. This study includes all schools, colleges, or educational institutions supported in any way by public taxation. The commission is instructed to prepare and submit such educational program and laws to the next legislature as, in their opinion, will place the state educational system in the front ranks of the states. The findings, reports, and recommendations must be in the hands of the next legislature when it convenes on the first Tuesday after the first Monday in April, 1929.

"The law also provides that any person who wilfully and knowingly withholds records or wilfully hinders the work of the commission or its staff, shall upon conviction, be fined not more than $500.00 or confined in the county jail not more than ninety days. Apparently, the legislature is determined that the work of the commission shall go on without interference," said Dr. Phillip.

"The law provides an appropriation of $50,000.00 to carry on the work to cover office expenses, field work, and cost of getting the report before the people of Florida. All the members of the commission itself serve without pay."

Those appointed on the Educational Survey Commission by Governor Martin are: George R. Hilty of Palatka and Miami, A. A. McLeod of Bartow, I. E. Phillips of Jacksonville, Mrs. Katherine R. Tippetts of St. Petersburg, state president of Florida Federation of Women Clubs, and Mrs. A. F. Pauger of Pensacola, state president of the Florida Parent Teachers Association.

Six days after the governor appointed the commission, they met at Bartow and organized, with I. E. Phillips of Jacksonville chairman.

At the following meeting they established headquarters in the new Riverside Theatre building in Jacksonville and engaged the Educational Research Bureau of Teachers College, Columbia University, New York City, under Dr. George D. Strayer, to direct the field of the survey.

At the third meeting a budget submitted by the field director involving an expenditure of $75,000.00 to cover the work of the commission was approved, provided the additional $25,000.00 required could be obtained. This budget only commits the State of Florida to the sum of $50,000.00 authorized by law, according to Dr. Phillips. Negotiations are already far advanced towards securing the additional funds required.

In speaking of the acts of the commission and the reason the Columbia University Bureau was engaged to make the survey for Florida, Dr. Phillips summarized it as follows:

"1st: The Columbia Research Bureau is recognized as the foremost in the country.

"2nd: The General Educational Board of the Rockefeller Foundation has indicated its willingness to cooperate with the Columbia Research Bureau in work and financing."

"3rd. This Bureau has already made a survey of the Duval County schools and the Tampa City schools, requiring an exhaustive study of the Florida school laws at a heavy expenditure of money, which will be a great saving to the state of Florida in me the of work and many thousand dollars in cost.

"4th. The time in which to make a thorough survey is so short that the men directing the work must necessarily be thoroughly acquainted through past work with our Florida school problems.

"We are not satisfied" continued Mr. Phillips, "with anything but the best, and we believe Columbia University is one of the best. Dr. George D. Strayer is their field director, in charge of making the field study. He is now organizing his staff and forces and negotiating with different educational institutions to lend specialists and experts without cost to the state other than their actual expenses. Share the legislators of Florida have made up their minds to raise Florida's school standards, the general education board has indicated its willingness to lend its support and finance any requirements above the amount appropriated by the legislature. We are determined that the children of the state of Florida are going to have an educational system second to none in the United States, so that Florida can boast that she has as good school advantages as obtainable in any other state, if not better. We hope to make our school system an example which other states will follow.

"The most important piece of legislation," Mr. Phillips stated, "in recent Folrida legislatures has been the creation of this commission, composed of business men and women who are concerned only in conducting the work of this commission as they are conducting the business of the companies they represent. Through the cooperation of Florida's public spirited press we hope to keep the public informed from time to time of the conditions learned and progress made in this great task."

BLACKSHEEP!

her business was all to be in northern Michigan this summer. Your stars have certainly made a monkey of you this time! You talk like a nonsense book! How much luggage are we taking?"

The Governor rang for Timmons to do their packing and fell upon a time table.

They wrote themselves down on the hotel register at Rochester as Saulsbury and Comly and were quickly in the rooms the Governor had engaged by wire. A short time later Archie found himself whisked away to a handsome residential area where the Governor dismissed the driver at a corner and continued afoot for several blocks.

The Governor ran his stick along the top of a wall that grimly guarded the rear of the premises. He caught the edge and was quickly on top. When Archie hung back the Governor grasped him by the arms and swung him up and dropped him into a dark corner of the garden. Then he left him with the injunction to remain where he was.

"Archie! Oh, Archie!" the Governor whispered excitedly, brushing an envelope across the bewildered Archie's face. "Strike a match before I perish."

He tore open the envelope and his fingers trembled as he held the note to the light. He read the two sheets to himself eagerly; then demanded a second match and read aloud:

"If this reaches you, remain near at hand until I can see you. Please understand that I promise nothing, but it is very possible that you may be able to serve me. My aunt is giving a party for me Thursday night. I must leave it to you as to how best to arrange for a short interview the day following. A very dear friend needs help. The matter is urgent."

The match curled and fell upon Archie's fingers. A tense silence lay upon the garden. The Governor clasped Archie's hand tightly.

"It has come as I always knew it would come! And something tells me I am near the end. Even with all my faith, boy, it's staggering. And this is the very night of the dance."

"It's about time for us to clear out," Archie remarked.

"What! Leave this sacred soil when she's here? Not on your life, Archie! I shall not leave till I've had speech with her." The festal occasion offers an ideal opportunity for the meeting! It's going to be a big affair and we can merge with the happy throng and trust to our wits to get us out alive.

He urged Archie, still resisting, through the grounds to the front entrance, where they were admitted with several other guests who arrived at the moment. The stately old lady in the drawing room lifted a lorgnette as they approached, smiled affably and gave the Governor her hand.

"Mrs. Lindsay, my friend, Mr. Comly. He arrived unexpectedly an hour ago and I thought you wouldn't mind my bringing him along.

"I should have been displeased if you had hesitated a moment—any friend of yours, you know!"

Other arrivals facilitated their escape, and as they stepped into the conservatory the music ceased and there was a flutter as the dancers sought seats, or stepped out upon the lawn. Archie, acutely uncomfortable, heard the Governor stifle an exclamation.

"That is she! Stand by me now! That chap's just left her. This is our chance!"

A young woman was just seating herself in a chair at the farther end of the conservatory. The Governor moved toward her quickly. Archie saw her lift her head suddenly and her lips parted as though she was about to make an outcry. Then the Governor bowed low over her hand, uttering explanations in a low tone. Her surprise had yielded to what Archie, loitering behind, thought an expression of relief and satisfaction. He moved forward as the Governor turned toward him.

"Miss Hastings, Mr. Comly."

"My name here," the Governor was saying, "is Saulsbury."

"I think," said Archie, "that the moment has come for me to retire."

"We shall not turn you adrift!" cried Ruth. "I have a very dear friend I must introduce you to."

"Oh, Isabel!"

Following her gaze he was glad of the slight pressure of her hand on his arm. Here at least was something tangible in a world that tottered toward chaos. For it was Isabel Perry who turned at the sound of Ruth's voice.

"Miss Perry, Mr. Comly!"

"Oh, Mr. Comly!" There was the slightest stress on the assumed name. "After this dance——"

She slipped away, leaving him startled, and Archie, in a daze, lead Ruth back to the Governor.

At the conclusion of the number, Isabel remained, to Archie's discomfiture, at the farther end of the platform, and when he hurried forward in the hope of detaching her from the group that surrounded her she did not see him at all, which was wholly discouraging. A partner sought her for the next dance and as the music struck up he made bold to accost her.

"I am not to be eluded!" he said. "I must have at least one dance!"

"My card is filled—but I am reserving a boon for you! You shall have the intermission."

He passed Ruth, returning to put herself in the path of her next partner.

"This is your punishment for coming late!" laughed the girl. There was happiness in her eyes. "How perfectly ridiculous you two men are!"

"Suppose we talk a bit," said the Governor when they had found a bench on the lawn.

"It's nearing the end!" he said solemnly. "There are other changes and chances, perhaps, but the end is in sight. The whole thing was unalterable from the beginning; it makes little difference what we do now. And it's you—it's you that have brought it all about. We are bound together by ties not of earthly making."

"You are beginning to believe at last?"

"I don't know what to believe," Archie answered slowly. "Just how much do you understand of it?"

"Precious little! Your Isabel and my Ruth are friends, quite intimate friends indeed. That's news to you, isn't it?"

"Most astonishing news!"

"And now I'll prepare you a little for what I prefer you should hear from Isabel—I got it from Ruth—you're not quite finished yet with that pistol shot in the Congdon house. It seems to be echoing round the world!"

ROMANCES OF CIVIL WAR ARE TOLD BY ST. CLOUD WOMAN

MRS. NELSON TELLS KANSAN FRIENDS OF ADVENTURES OF FOSTER FATHER DURING GREAT CONFLICT OF 1865-6

Although she has lived in St. Cloud for more than 15 years, Mrs. J. A. Nelson spoke yesterday as though she was a regular Kansan and told some of the things that but few know of the days gone by.

Yes, she comes from St. Cloud, Florida. She is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson's nephew, Dr. W. O. Nelson. In her recitation of incidents of more than fifty years ago, she gave a vivid story of the capture of her foster father, Capt. W. L. Branson while waiting at Willow Springs to make her son. She recalled the days when he was a "coupe de e'tat," and himself was captured by the opposing forces.

One night some fifteen pro-slavery men went to the Branson home, captured Mr. Branson and took him to a bridge on the Wakarusa, where they were going to hang him, alleging that he had been one of the leading abolitionists in this part of the country.

However, a carpenter by the name of Locke, who lived at the Branson home, slipped out of the back door and gave the alarm to the neighbors, who formed a posse under the leadership of Sam Wood. By taking a short cut, the posse was able to reach this side of the Wakarusa, where they found three barrels of whiskey left by the raiders, before the latter had arrived at the south end of the bridge. Hearing a noise from the posse, the others stopped immediately, whereupon Wood's men inquired if Branson were among them.

"Yes, I'm here," he answered.

When questioned as to whether he were on horseback or not, he replied, "No, on a d—— mule."

He was then told to ride over to the place where the posse was stationed. He started and a fusillade of shots followed, though in the ensuing fray, neither he nor the mule were hit.

The rescuers returned home but Mr. Branson thought it safer to go to another community, so remained hidden at Lecompton for about three weeks. About a week after he had returned home, another band came to the Branson door and when Mrs. Branson answered the summons to open the door, the leader asked if her husband were there.

"We have come for him," he said.

"You can't have him," replied Mrs. Branson.

"Stand aside, we want him," was the rejoinder.

"Don't come a step farther or I will shoot," from Mrs. Branson, who held a pepper box revolver in each hand. "and I'd shoot to kill," she added as he stroked his beard and questioned if she really meant what she said.

It was not until after the men had departed that Mrs. Branson learned that neither of the revolvers was loaded.

Again her husband thought it best to stay away from home and remained in seclusion for two weeks.

Soon after his return he and a neighbor, by the name of W. Dow went to Brooklyn, a station no longer in existence, which stood between Willow Springs and Baldwin. While in a blacksmith shop there, one of the Missourians entered the shop and shot Mr. Dow. He was taken home by his friend and later buried a short distance from his home.

At the time of Quantrill's raid on August 21, 1863, Mrs. Veach was a child of six or seven and remembers clearly of standing on a high hill, near the school house at which she attended school, and seeing the smoke as it arose from the burning city, after a runner had passed through the neighborhood about ten o'clock in the morning warning the people that Quantrill and his men intended to go straight south to Prairie City. Accordingly the people hid some of their valuables in the fields.

However, smoke arising along the roadside to the west, indicated that the marauders had changed their course. A posse of men in the neighborhood was organized, which headed off the band, killed some of the men and captured part of the stolen goods. Mrs. Nelson recalls that Mrs. Branson later purchased some of the stolen silk.

At the outbreak of the civil war, Mr. Branson disposed of his property at Willow Springs, moved his family to Leavenworth and enlisted in the army. His death occurred a number of years later.—Topeka (Kans.) Pilot.
